1. After the desired length of hose is measured, wrap the hose with the provided tape using a line tool as a guide, but do not seal, or the tape will not adhere properly. It is important to ensuring proper installation.

2. Once the hose is inserted into the socket and pushed in, turn the hose until it is snug against the socket. The IP will be at the top of the hose and the tape will be visible on the outside of the fitting.

3. The nipple is inserted into the socket and pushed in until it is flush with the socket. There should be a gap of 1/16" or less between the nipple and the socket.

When routing the hose, be sure to avoid sharp turns that put stress on the hose and cause it to kink. Be sure all hose lengths are at least a little slack so that there is no stress on the hose when the engine is running.
